Train Dispatcher's Convention—The Next Meeting to be Held in Salt Lake City.

New Orleans, La., June 16.—The Train Dispatchers' Association of America continued its session today. The special order was the question of protection, and as the discussion has been very bitter throughout the year, a sensational session and the division of the organization were expected. The two sides harmonized, however, and agreed to give conservative protection a trial for a year, unanimously adopted the following resolution: "The executive committee of this association shall constitute a grievance committee for receiving complaints from members of injustice imposed by employers and for adjusting such differences; that when a member has been wrongfully dealt with by his employer, and upon complaint being made to the chairman of the executive committee, an investigation of the facts shall be immediately instituted by the chairman and the executive committee shall have full power to act in a conservative manner in the matter, but if they can not adjust the grievance they shall formulate a full and complete statement of the grievances under investigation, and submit the same, with an appeal, to the American Society of Railroad Superintendents at their meeting thereafter, for their co-operation and assistance as a mediator in adjusting the wrong done to the train dispatcher. At the annual meeting a report shall be made to the association.

The next meeting of the association will take place on the third Tuesday in June at Salt Lake City.

AMONG GREAT MEN.

That is Where B. G. Wilkerson of Sedalia, was Born and Graduated.

Mr. B. G. Wilkerson, one of the ablest and best known lawyers in this city, has the honor of having been born in Warren county, Ohio, on one side of which lies Hamilton county, where President Harrison first saw the light; and Greene county on the other side, in which Whitelaw Reid, the republican nominee for Vice-president, was born.

Another interesting fact is that Mr. Wilkerson is an alumnus of the celebrated Miami university at Oxford, Ohio, having graduated there in 1869. Both Harrison and Reid are graduates of this same institution, the president having belonged to the class of 1852 and the New York Tribune editor to that of 1856.

The alumni of Miami university number many of the prominent men in the United States. Rev. David Swing, the famous Chicago preacher, graduated with President Harrison. General Robert C. Schenck, minister to England; Dr. S. S. Laws, late president of the Missouri State university; Wm. S. Groesbeck, democratic counsel in the Hayes-Tilden electoral contest; Dr. Jas. H. Brooks, the distinguished St. Louis Presbyterian divine; General James Fullerton, a celebrated union general, now of St. Louis; United States Senator George E. Pugh, of Ohio; Joseph Davis, brother of Jefferson Davis, president of the Confederacy; Calvin S. Brice, chairman of the democratic national committee; the late George H. Pendleton, of Ohio and not a few others almost equally noted.

Mr. Wilkerson has a stack of Miami university catlogues, dating back many years before he started out from its honored walls into the battle of life.

Put Up and Put Down.

I want a word to rhyme with ill. I have it now, I'll put down pills. Excuse me, though—than put down pills. I'd rather suffer some big ill's.
To put down the old-fashioned, huge bitter pills, that gripped so and made such disturbance internally is more than a wise man will do. He will not put up with such unnecessary suffering. He uses Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. As a Liver Pill they are unequaled. Smallest, cheapest, easiest, to take. Put up in vials, hermetically sealed, hence always fresh and reliable, which is not true of the large pills in wood or pasteboard boxes. As a gentle laxative only one Pellet for a dose. Three to four of these tiny sugar-coated granules act pleasantly and painlessly as a cathartic.

FATALLY BURNED.

Dr. Priest was called to the home of Hamilton Ward, about six miles southwest of Nevada yesterday to administer to the little daughter of Mr. Ward who had met with a shockingly painful accident.

The little girl is about nine or ten years old. Her mother being dead considerable of the household duties involve upon her, even though she is of tender years.

After she arose in the morning she went to kindle the fire in the kitchen stove, and by some means her clothing caught fire. The blaze soon enveloped her, burning her terribly over the entire body and left arm.

Dr. Priest found her suffering intensely. He dressed the burns and did all that was possible to alleviate her suffering, but she is in an exceedingly critical condition.

A SMART GIRL.

Miss Stella Yeater, living at 302 Grand avenue, Sedalia, received honorable mention at the close of the school year last week in the architectural department of the art institute of Chicago. The architectural school is recently founded, and no higher honors are given this year. Miss Yeater was the only woman in the class at the time the honor was conferred. She is a sister of Mr. Charles Yeater of this city and is a remarkably brilliant and able young lady.

—Walter Williams, editor of the Columbia Herald, and Miss Hulda Harned, of Vermont, Cooper county, will be united in marriage on June 30. Mr. Williams has just returned from San Francisco, where he attended the national editorial convention, of which important body he was elected first vice-president. Miss Harned is one of the loveliest and most truly accomplished young ladies in Central Missouri, and a graduate in music and literature of Hardin college, Mexico, Mo. The engagement and forthcoming wedding are among the most notable matrimonial announcements of the summer season, and Mr. Williams is entitled to and hereby receives in advance the congratulations of the "paper published for the people now on earth."

DIED IN NEW MEXICO.

Mr. J. M. Offield received a telegram from San Antonio, Texas, to-day containing the intelligence of the death of Warren Weigart son of Lou Weigart, who died some years ago in this city, his mother formerly being Miss Emma Shelton, now Mrs. M. L. Robbins. He was about seventeen years of age and died at Los Vegas, N. M., of consumption. The remains will arrive here Wednesday morning and services will be held at Calvary church at 10 o'clock of the same day. The remains will be accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. M. L. Robbins. All the parties are well known here, and all friends would confer a favor by attending the funeral services at the church.

A BRILLIANT AFFAIR.

The Marmaduke Military Ball a Blaze of Beauty and Chivalry Last Night.

The first annual ball given by the cadets of the Marmaduke Military Academy at Sweet Springs last night was one of the most brilliant events of this kind ever occurring in Central Missouri. Friends of the cadets were present from Iowa, Kansas, Texas, Indian Territory and many portions of Missouri. The hall was elaborately decorated. A military band of twenty pieces furnished the music. An elegant banquet was served in the mess hall. Company A was awarded the prize of a handsome silk flag as the best-drilled company, Miss Newell Shelley, of Kansas City, making the presentation. Cadet Harold, of Fort Worth, Tex., received the gold medal or the best declamation, and Cadet Cuver, of Kansas City, silver medal for the second best. Cadet R. R. St. John of Carthage, was awarded the gold medal for gentlemanly conduct. Cadet Clanny of Henry county, Adam Hill of Independence, and Roy Hunter of Texas were each awarded medals for distinction in different line. Cadets Shackelford of Kentucky and Woodward of St. Louis, have appointments respectively to Annapolis and West Point. The Marmaduke Guards of Kansas City, will take part in the exercises to-night, at which time Col. D. P. Dyer, of St. Louis, will address the cadets.

PERSONAL AND OTHERWISE.

New York World.

—The place for which Henry Labouchere is slated in the approaching Gladstonian ministry is that of Postmaster-General, with a seat in the cabinet.

—Gen. E. Burd Grubb is soon to return from his mission in Spain, and when he reaches his summer residence at Edgewater Park he will be accorded a martial reception worthy of his military greatness. A military contractor has the decorations in charge, and the display of flags and furbelows and the trappings of war will be such as to bring joy to the heart of any son of Mars.

—The late James Ripley Osgood is sincerely mourned in London, where his good-fellowship had made him widely popular in literary circles. All London remembered with interest the famous walking match he arranged for Dickens's amusement in Boston, when the novelist made his reading tour of America in 1867-1868. Dickens burlesqued this race in his best vein in his "Sporting Narrative," in which Osgood appeared as the "Boston Bantam" and Dolby, his competitor, as the "Man of Ross." Mr. Osgood was at that time a partner in the firm of Ticknor & Fields.

—Mrs. Jesse James told the Kansas City reporters that she was glad Bob Ford was dead, as his fate was deserved, but she refused to talk about her husband's death. Mrs. James lives in a pretty cottage on the outskirts of Kansas City with her daughter Mary and her many little son, Jesse. She is a soft-voiced and modest woman whose neighbors think a great deal of her. Frank James, the dead bandit's brother, lives in Dallas, Texas. He is now in Independence, Mo., where he went to attend the commencement exercises at Marmaduke military academy, where his son Robert is a cadet.

—Charles Stewart Smith, president of the chamber of commerce and trustee of the Metropolitan Museum, says the art treasures of the latter amount in value to $7,000,000. Millions of dollars, he argues, have been spent in Dresden alone by strangers drawn thither by the famous art gallery, and Italy has lived for a half century on money spent by strangers attracted in the same way. There should be no restriction on art in America, no tax which operates to keep out art objects and the visitors who would come to admire them. In three or four American establishments—of their kind among the largest in the world—the artists in designing departments each costing $40,000 or $50,000 a year are nearly all foreigners, Mr. Smith says.

—Mr. F. L. Gillette came up from Rochepot yesterday. He is of the firm of Smith & Gillette, railroad contractors. They have the contract for grading several miles of the new road directly across the river near New Franklin. They also have twenty miles of heavy rock work along the bluffs below Rochepot. He told us that the work is only fairly begun, and having been delayed for weeks because of the wet weather. He is now working fifty men and wants as many more. A large force is at work on the Rochepot tunnel and it will be completed by fall. Col. John S. Elliott of this city has the contract for furnishing ties for the entire road. We are assured that it will be open for traffic by January 1, 1893.—Boonville Star.

BLAINE'S BOOMERANG.

The following editorial from the Mac n. Ga., News, is a gem in its way, and is well worthy of a reading.

James G. Blaine, ex-secretary of state, a man whose whole life is tinged with romance and whose bright, bold, aggressive, magnetic, sympathetic and impressive nature has won many faithful personal friends, although they be hostile to the creed he impersonates, has passed forever as a potentiality in American politics.

A man without fear and without reproach, a man seen always yonder where the fight is thickest, a gallant and chivalric man whose name is the synonym of honor. For twelve years James G. Blaine has been called the White-Pommed Knight. He has been the idol of his party. He has been its shining herald, and his name has been that of a great leader of men. To speak of Blaine was to think of magnetism, of proud deeds, and to recall the memory of Henry of Navarre. To the R-republican party James G. Blaine has been an tutelary divinity, a man whose remarkable mental resources and splendid magnetic qualities have for years given the succeeding republican administrations the prestige and power they have enjoyed and whose name represents to them the purest, highest ideal of the principles they cherish.

He went down Friday under the hoofs of a trained and disciplined army of Federal officeholders—men who owed him thanks for the very emoluments that they enjoy. Forgotten, ignored and practically discarded by his party, Mr. Blaine can find, perhaps, in private life the peace and contentment which has been denied him in his public career. His has been a stormy and sad existence. No man has been more maligned or misrepresented. But no man has today warmer or more sincere friends.

Blaine realizes too fully that a period has been put to his political life and also that sadder fact remains with him that the pitcher will soon be broken at the fountain and that he will soon become a memory.

His failure to attain the chief civic dignity of the commonwealth is similar to the fate of the great triumvirate, Clay, Calhoun and Webster, who merited that distinction, aspired to it, but failed in the accomplishment of their darling ambition.

The conclusion forces itself upon the intelligence of the country that the nomination to the presidency is but a fortuitous event and that statesmanship is but a side issue in the contest.

Blaine and his friends must feel keenly and bitterly this flagrant ingratitude of the party to whom he has always been a "very present help in trouble," and it is human nature to expect that he and his adherents will connive at any movement that promises embarrassment to the success of the republicans.

His defeat has been accepted with bad grace by the powerful division who obey his mandates and it is but reasonable to suppose that they will exhaust the resources of their political ingenuity in contriving means to retaliate.

The democrats have a beautiful opportunity now of mastering the situation and scoring a complete victory, but they must religiously repress every appearance of factional wrangling and unite on the most available man.

Whitelaw Reid has ever been an uncompromising foe to organized labor and his name on the ticket will not strengthen it with the masses.

In view of these uncontested facts it is self-evident that Blaine, if he survives the year, will see the party that repaid him with gross ingratitude punished for its corruption and perfidy by the election of the democratic candidates.

He himself has drawn the drapery around his political future and will no more reappear upon the scene as an active, potential, factor in shaping legislation but he re-appears in his own discomfiture the fate of the party of which he was the most brilliant apostle, but which so perfidiously repudiated him.

Not since Boabdil turned upon the mountain side and, sighing, took his last glance at the beautiful city of Granada and the sparkling fountains of the Alhambra palace, has the world witnessed a passing alike so pathetic, so touching and so bitter in its memories.
